Cavemanomics:

The chatroom function for our project I am developing will have the following function types: a simple external input function that takes the text input from the user, a simple external output function that displays the chat log to the user, an average complexity external interface file that is the database containing the logs for the chat, a simple external inquiry that sends text input gathered from the external input function to the database, and an average complexity external inquiry that gets the chat logs from the database to be displayed by the external output function.

The total function points are 3 + 4 + 7 + 3 + 4 = 21.
